Home Plans Huge Building Program

LEGISLATURE WILL BE ASKED TO SUPPLY HOSPITAL, NURSERY

New Cottages and Repair
Of Others Also Planned

A new hospital, nursery and four additional cottages, are contained in a building program for the O. S. and S. O. Home for which an appropriation of approximately $500,000 is to be asked of the legislature at its next session by the board of trustees.

The budget for the next six months to be presented to the legislature at its coming session will include the request for this appropriation, according to Superintendent T. E. Andrews. Announcement of the proposed improvement plan was made following the September meeting of the trustees which concluded Sunday afternoon when preparation of the budget was commenced.

Besides the proposed new buildings the appropriation sought is to cover cost of new wiring, new plumbing and new stairways in the twenty original cottages at the Home.

The medical advisory staff of the Home and the Ohio Department of the American Legion are backing the improvement plan, according to Superintendent Andrews. The Legion is interested in the plan through its welfare work for children of World War veterans because before many years the major part of the population of the institution will be composed of children of that war. Spanish-American War veterans now have the majority of children in the Home with a few orphans of Civil War veterans whose activities gave Ohio the Home more than half a century ago still in the institution.

The medical advisory staff is interested in obtaining better hospital facilities. The main hospital building was erected in 1888 and is obsolete, it is said. Four cottage wards are maintained in connection with it. According to Superintendent Andrews the idea is to build a hospital along the general plan of the McClellan Hospital on a smaller scale.

There are twenty-six cottages in use at the Home. Six of these are double cottages, five of which were built twenty years or more ago and one of which is a building originally intended for a hospital, which was later converted into a cottage.

The contemplated nursery building is intended for children under four years of age who are not now received at the Home. A number of years ago when the state bought the Sullivan farm, formerly the Meredith place, adjoining the Home farm on the west, it was intended to use the large homestead on the farm for a nursery. After a short time it was abandoned for the purpose when it was found unsuitable and too remote from the institution proper. The house is now rented and is occupied by the family of Prof. W. S. Sackett, superintendent of schools at the Home.

When the police cordon became too tight he shot and killed himself. Bruemsted's mother, 98, helpless and unable to move, was a witness of both killings. Officers found her alone and hysterical when they broke down the barricaded doors.

SIMPLE FUNERAL RITES BEING PLANNED FOR RUDY VALENTINO

Hollywood Will Pay Final Tribute To Dead Actor—
Opera Singer Will Sing "Miserere"
At Services

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 6.—Simple, impressive ceremonies will attend the funeral of Rudolph Valentino Tuesday.

Arrangements for the services were completed today, and Hollywood is prepared to pay its final tribute to the memory of the actor.

Only a few of Valentino's close friends and associates will view the coffin from the time the body is taken from the train here Monday, until the last drops of holy water fall in the form of a cross on the bronze cover.

At the foot of the altar in the Church of the Good Shepherd, Beverly Hills, the final ceremony of the church, a solemn requiem mass, will be celebrated.

The final tribute will be offered in song. Richard Bonelli, leading tenor of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, a fellow countryman, and great admirer of the actor, will sing the "Miserere" at the church services.

Rev. Father Mullins, pastor of the Church of the Good Shepherd and chaplain of the Catholic Motion Picture Guild, who was a friend and spiritual adviser to Valentino, will officiate at the requiem mass services and will accompany the body to the Hollywood cemetery.

COLUMBUS STORE ROBBED BY BANDITS

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 6.—Three burglars handcuffed the day watchman in the Boston clothing store here today, blew a safe on the fifth floor and escaped with several hundred dollars. The yeggs who had entered the store through an unlocked window lay in waiting for Clyde Rawlings, the watchman, and leaped upon him as he made his rounds. They disarmed Rawlings and handcuffed him to an elevator cage.

Then the trio broke open the safe on the fifth floor and looted it. Rawlings finally freed himself and gave the alarm after wrenching loose a bar of the elevator cage.

William Clark slipped into a huge sand bin used in excavating for a New York subway and was buried under twenty tons of sand. He conserved his breath, and when workers reached him he was alive, but unconscious. He is shown being lowered by ropes down the side of the hopper.

REBELLION HALTED WHEN DISGRUNTLED OFFICERS ARE HELD

All Officers Of Artillery
Suspended As Disciplinary Act

MADRID, Sept. 6.—All Spain was under martial law today as a result of efforts of certain military groups to prevent enforcement of governmental decrees.

All artillery officers have been suspended from office and two of the higher ranking officers were arrested in an effort to prevent rebellion which the disgruntled officers threatened to wage against the government of General Primo de Rivera.

King Alfonso made a night trip from his summer home, San Sebastian, to Madrid by motor to confer with De Rivera before the martial law decree was signed and promulgated.

Madrid was calm last night and the government had not indicated the existence of disorder elsewhere.

An official communique explained the sudden imposition of martial law by citing the dissatisfaction in the artillery corps which according to the communique, had culminated in "acts of real indiscipline." The commandant of the artillery corps is alleged yesterday to have ordered all his officers to return to their regiments. The duke of Tetuan, who is minister of war, had no knowledge of this order. The artillery commander at Segovia, without knowledge of the minister, ordered his troops concentrated at headquarters to be prepared "in the event that other troops from Madrid might attack them."

These two overt acts caused General De Rivera to decide upon martial law as the only means of controlling the situation. Both the artillery commandant and the commanding officer at Segovia were arrested.

Both King Alfonso and De Rivera signed the following decree of martial law:

"In accordance with the decision of the council of ministers, martial law is proclaimed throughout Spain and also in the Balearic and Canary Islands. All who oppose or resist the government's orders in connection with the present decree will be considered rebels in the face of the enemy and will be judged by summary jurisdiction. All persons will be considered equally implicated who help such opposition or resistance, directly or indirectly, and also who refuse assistance to the government in dealing with resistance."

The decree dismissing the artillery officers excludes those in Morocco because "their conception of duty certainly will prevent them from committing the faults which necessitated this decree."

The government subsequently issued a communique in which it was asserted that the crisis had passed with the submission of the officers involved.

HENDAYE, France, Spanish Frontier, Sept. 6.—According to apparently authoritative news from across the border the entire Spanish army today was ready to rebel against the dictatorship of General Primo de Rivera who three years ago this month seized control of the government of Spain. Enlisted men of the army were making common cause with the officers, especially artillery officers, according to the reports.

Military unrest in Spain was caused by General De Rivera's army reforms, especially directed against the wealthy and socially powerful artillery officers. The dictator decreed three months that the old system of promoting officers strictly according to seniority should be superseded by promotion by merit.

In various ways the artilleryists subsequently have sought to prevent enforcement of this decree. There have been portents of trouble in Spain during the past few months. Last week a delegation representing the artillery officers called on De Rivera and demanded that he resign. Earlier in the summer General Valeriano Weyler, eighty-seven years old, and famous in the United States as the military governor of Cuba before the Spanish American war, was arrested for his part in an abortive revolution. Half a dozen prominent men were arrested on the same charge.

INDUSTRY STOPS TO HONOR WORKING MAN ON LABOR DAY

LABOR DAY belied its name Monday for few labored.

Industry's wheels stopped and the entire United States paused in its activities to pay homage to one of the great factors in the country's development, the laboring man.

Banks, building and loan associations, the postoffice and city and county offices observed the holiday, the last of the summer season.

No community celebration was planned in connection with recognition of the day in Xenia but citizens individually took note of the occasion.

The American worker is better off than any other worker in the world. He has better food, better clothes, more leisure and more luxuries. In other words, he has shared widely in the nation's prosperity for which he is in no small way responsible. His importance in the national scheme of things

HISTORY OF LABOR DAY

- 1882—First parade of the Knights of Labor in New York City.
- 1884—Repetition of the above parade. Resolution passed by the organization to hold all parades on the first Monday in September.
- 1887—Labor Day made a legal holiday in Colorado by act of the legislature March 15.
- 1890—Labor parades held in Europe May 1 and for years were violently opposed because they were believed to be radical.
- 1887—Establishment of Labor Day as a holiday throughout the United States, territories and 1926 possessions, and in Canada.

is emphasized by this yearly observance of Labor Day.

Last spring a committee of British workmen visited the United States and Canada to determine the secret of labor's high position in this country. This expedition, sponsored by the London Daily Mail, visited many of our great industrial centers and studied conditions there.

They discovered that high wages were the result of great productivity, which in turn came from cheap power, efficient operation, abundant natural resources, and highly organized methods of production.

The extensive use of electricity and other forms of power has revolutionized production and enabled the worker to produce far more than he could by hand, and so make much more money. Sanitary working conditions and modern, well-lighted factories further aid the efficiency of the laborer.

These British visitors were surprised to find the American worker living in a house with hardwood floors, a tiled bathroom, a telephone and radio. They found hundreds of automobiles parked around the factories here. They found the wives of the workers doing their work quickly and efficiently with modern labor-saving appliances and their children going to college.

The American laboring man realizes all this and so he takes a day off in September and celebrates.

TWIN SISTERS SWIM HUDSON FOR 17 MILES AS TEST FOR CHANNEL

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Two sisters, blonde twins and twelve years old were studying a map of the English channel at their home today, after having shown New York that they could do an "Ederle."

Arm over arm, swimming the crawl stroke in unison, the two flaxen haired girls swam down the Hudson from Yonkers to the Battery yesterday, a distance of seventeen miles.

"It was easy," Phyllis Zitenfield, said as she left the water off Lower Broadway.

"It was easy," her twin sister Bernice echoed.

But their teeth chattered and their lips were blue with cold. They are big girls for their age. Each weighs 120 pounds. Their father and mother greased their children ala Ederle at Yonkers and the two jumped into the cold Hudson at 10 a. m., yesterday, breaststroke, and swam gamely—had some liquid food when off 96th Street and after six hours and a half in the water

BELIEVE DEATH TOLL MAY BE INCREASED BY SEARCH OF WRECKED COACHES

Fifty Injured—Spreading Rails On Sharp Curve
Blamed When "Scenic Limited" Falls Into Arkansas River

SALIDA, Colo., Sept. 6.—(UP)—Fear that the death toll of nineteen in the wreck of the eastbound "Scenic Limited" of the Denver and Rio Grande western railway near here Sunday would be increased when all the coaches of the wrecked train are searched was expressed today by survivors of the accident.

The crack passenger train plunged into the Arkansas river when the locomotive struck a sharp curve. It was believed the rails spread, hurling the engine, a baggage car, two day coaches and two Pullmans into the river.

At least fifty persons were injured, several of them seriously.

The wreck occurred in a desolate region of the Rocky Mountains and relief trains did not reach the scene until several hours after the derailment.

Those passengers and members of the train crew who were not injured worked frantically to extricate the dead and dying from the mass of wreckage of the steel cars.

Among the dead are C. E. Doherty, Kearney, Neb.; Mrs. C. Lockman, Clarksburg, W. Va.; and William Daniels, Jonesboro, Ark. Two of the dead have not been identified.

Included in the list of injured are Dr. Andrew Nelson, Lincoln, Neb.; Dora Fitch, Omaha, Neb.; Mrs. Arthur Bruegemeyer, Blue Island, Ill.; J. S. Hendrickson, Comoa, Tex.; Lucille Miller, Houston, Tex.; H. L. and Harry Mills, Houston; C. D. Roaman, Princeton, Ill.; Helen Holt, Elmont, Kas.

The train which left Salt Lake City Saturday afternoon was composed of fifteen cars and carried 217 passengers, according to officials of the road. Pulling the "Scenic Limited" was engine number 1604, said to be one of the largest locomotives in the country.

The scene of the wreck is about fifty miles from the royal gorge, one of the show places of the Rockies.

A year ago, the "Panoramic Special," another of the crack line trains of the Denver and Rio Grande Western, was wrecked nine miles from the scene of yesterday's accident with a loss of two lives.

BRAKEMAN KILLED WHEN PENNSY TRAIN HITS HIM SUNDAY

Victim Believed To Have
Been Sitting On
Rails

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 6.—Lawrence W. Wilt, 33, of 1003 Leonard Ave., freight brakeman on the Pennsylvania Railroad, was instantly killed at South Charleston at 4:30 a. m. yesterday when struck by a northbound Pennsylvania passenger train.

The body was brought here by the Egan Co.

Local Pennsylvania Railroad officials were unable to give any details of the accident, as it happened on the Cincinnati division, but the version received here was that Wilt's train, which was south bound, had taken a siding at South Charleston to let the passenger train through. Shortly after the train passed, Wilt was found cut in two through the body and with one leg severed. Indications were that the victim was sitting on the rail when struck, it was said.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Beulah Wilt, one son and one daughter; his mother, Mrs. Walter Wilt, and a sister, Mrs. Walter Strop all of Columbus.

This is the second death in the family within six weeks, a baby having died then.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

SENATE WILL MEET MONTH EARLY THIS FALL TO TRY JUDGE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—For the tenth time in the history of the United States, the Senate will try a federal official upon impeachment charges when it meets November 10 to consider the evidence against George W. English, federal judge of the eastern district of Illinois.

English was impeached last session by the House of Representatives upon recommendation of its judiciary committee which found the jurist guilty upon five counts. He was charged (1) with tyrannically and oppressively disbaring two attorneys, coercing a jury and threatening freedom of the press; (2) misdemeanor in office in handling bankruptcy cases; (3) extension of partiality and favoritism to a sole referee in bankruptcy; (4) corrupt and improper control of the deposit of bankruptcy and (5) that he has treated members of the bar coarsely, indecently, arbitrarily and tyrannically.

Preliminary details of the involved impeachment procedure were compiled with during the last session of the Senate and all preparations have been made to begin the actual trial when the Upper House reconvenes a month before the regular session in a special session called for that purpose.

The Senate will be turned in to a court for the trial. Vice-President Charles G. Dawes will preside but the ninety-six members of the Senate by their votes will act as judges. The House of Representatives has appointed members to act as prosecutors of the impeachment charges and English will be represented by his own attorneys.

A notice already has been issued to English to appear on the opening day of the Senate ready for trial.

Only nine federal officials in history have been tried by the Senate, six of them judges. The only three convicted were judges: John Pickens, judge of the New Hampshire district court who in 1803 was held guilty of drunkenness and disregard of the statutes and dismissed from office; Robert W. Archibald, commerce court judge, who in 1912 was found guilty of corrupt collusion with coal mine owners and railroad officials and dismissed from office; and West H. Humphreys, Tennessee district judge, who in 1862 was voted unlawfully acting as judge of the confederate district court and removed.

Others tried include Senator William Blount, Tenn., charged with conspiring to wage war with Spain in favor of Great Britain, 1797; Samuel Chase, supreme court justice, for misconduct at trials of persons charged with violation of sedition laws, 1804; James Peck, Missouri district judge for tyrannous treatment of counsel, 1830; Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, for corrupt use of the veto power, 1868; William W. Belknap, Secretary of War, accepting bribes, 1876, and Charles Swayne, Florida district judge, for misconduct in office, 1905. All were acquitted or found not guilty.

The Workers

One day each year the Nation pauses in the strenuous rush of modern business affairs and stops to consider the debt that each one owes to the men who uphold the industries upon which the Nation's prosperity rests. It is the day when the capitalist is lost sight of, and the great army of workers, upon which capital depends, is in the foreground.

The United States is the greatest nation in the world today because employed in every line of labor there is a great multitude of intelligent, capable, upstanding workmen who have comfortable incomes and happy homes. They are in the truest sense the very backbone of the nation. Without them gold heaped mountains high would be as worthless as sand.

The business men of Xenia, appreciating profoundly the debt owed to the men who turn the wheels of industry in the city of Xenia and throughout the country, join in paying tribute to labor and acknowledge their debt to the men and women who devote their lives to carrying on the tremendous task of present day industry.

PARTY GIVEN FOR BRIDE-ELECT SATURDAY

Many friends are interested in the announcement of the engagement of Miss Grace Lile, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Lile, to Mr. J. Ernie Hutchison, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Hutchison.

Mrs. Lawrence Lile, sister-in-law of the bride-elect, was a charming hostess to fifteen girls at her home, south of town, Saturday evening. The announcement of Miss Lile and Mr. Hutchison's wedding date which will take place this October, was cleverly announced by having each girl draw her fortune which was concealed in nut shells the last one read being the announcement.

A contest was enjoyed, the prize being won by Miss Irma Evans, which was presented to the bride-elect. Immediately following this the guests wrote recipes and words of advice to Miss Lile.

Hydrangeas and golden rods which were used as decorations carried out the color scheme of yellow and white which predominated throughout the rooms. Those enjoying the evening were: the Misses Mabel Davis, Rosezella Harner, Eva Crumley, Lois Hutchison, Leona Smith, Alma Mendenhall, Mary Beam, Irma Evans, Leona Beam, Elizabeth Evans, Mrs. Herbert Wheeler, Miss Lolita Cline, Orlando, Fla. Miss Bernice Webster, Powell, O.

NUNLIKE DRESSES FOR ITALIAN WOMEN

By HEDDA HOYT

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Stylists are wondering whether the Italian women will accept the nunlike dresses which Premier Mussolini suggests in his newly-formed League of Nationalization of Women's Clothes. The League, which is headed by the Italian Queen, sponsors dresses which will protect Italian women from the "immodesty" of modern times.

The gowns accepted by the League cover the figure from neck to hem and they have sufficient width to conceal the outlines of the body. This movement for Italian-made clothes for Italian women has created quite a furor in the fashion centers of Paris, London and New York. The better class of Italian women styles heretofore found French styles much to their liking and it is very doubtful whether they will accept a National uniformity of dress. Poorer may find the new mode economical and practical and may accept Mussolini's command.

Some of the French countries are already turning out French gowns of Italian inspiration to meet the situation in Italy. This may mean that before long we shall have Italian designs and colors in America. When Russian women gave up all thought of style after the Revolution was immediately turned to styles of pre-Revolution days in Russia. For instance, wide sleeves embroidered, tunics, high collars and smocks were examples of Russian influence.

It is very doubtful whether any country where the smart women are cosmopolitan will accept a National mode of dressing. We have recently witnessed the discarding of veils by Turkish women. Many of them now wear modern dress. Flappers of China are growing up with unbound feet and many of them wear bobbed hair and modern frocks. In many instances women are at their best when dressed in their native costumes but one must travel far these days to find a place where a modern trend in dressing is not found.

ARRESTS FOR BOOZE LAW VIOLATIONS IN OHIO ON INCREASE

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 4.—Arrests for liquor law violations increased more than twenty-five per cent in Ohio—birthplace of the Anti-Saloon League during the fiscal year ending September 1, B. F. McDonald, state prohibition commissioner announced today in his annual report. State dry agents arrested 5,356 alleged violators, an increase of 1,464 over the year ending September 1, 1925, McDonald reported.

More than 1,500 persons are in Ohio jails today for liquor law violations, he said. Of the more than 1,500 now serving terms, McDonald said, sixty-eight were women at Marysville reformatory for women, thirty-five at the penitentiary farm, London, O.; nineteen in Mansfield reformatory, thirty-six at the penitentiary and more than 1,400 scattered over the state in jails and workhouses for nonpayment of fines.

Convictions for the year totaled 2,683, an increase of 1,590 over last year. Fines assessed totaled $1,154,227, an increase of $409,772. The total amount collected under the Crabbe act during the year which included some back fines was $1,838,246.

The state prohibition department cost the taxpayers $137,320 during the year.

McDonald said that the department was concentrating upon the liquor makers rather than the "half pint" violators.

He said there have been few complaints against state officers making unwarranted raids following adoption of the new policy of getting definite evidence first.

Enforcement conditions throughout the state were generally improving the dry chief asserted.

The prohibition commissioner reviewed conditions in Canton and paid high tribute to the late Don R. Mellett, who was slain during a crusade against vice and out-lawry.

"Progress is now being made in Canton," he said, "the same having been brought about by the supreme sacrifice of the editor of the Canton Daily News, Don R. Mellett."

"It is strange that the removal from office of the mayor and safety director of Canton two years ago was not sufficient to arouse the citizenship of that city to proper appreciation of the conditions there and that they should wait until loss of life occurred."

"But as bad as it may be, I do not regard the Canton situation as bad or threatening as conditions that have been prevailing in Steubenville where a very large number of murders have been committed and I am informed that none of the murderers thus far have been convicted."

McDonald cited the movement to oust the mayor and police chief of Steubenville as an "encouragement."

Sunday afternoon and passed resolutions, urging the Rev. and Mrs. Brown's return to Xenia.

Sentiment of the congregation, relative to the return of Dr. V. F. Brown, is voiced in a letter sent to Dr. Jesse R. Swank, for consideration.

The letter reads as follows: "Dr. Jesse R. Swank, 'Care Monroe St. M. E. Church, Toledo, O.' 'Dear Dr. Swank: 'Yesterday evening witnessed a very unusual meeting the official board of Trinity Church, this city. The occasion was the leaving of our pastor and friend, Dr. V. F. Brown. The meeting was called without his knowledge and its purpose was to secure his return to this charge. Fourteen members were present and four more sent favorable proxies. J. J. Stout was made chairman.

"The meeting was outstanding for its harmony, unity and determination in urging the return of Dr. Brown and most of all, for its flowing tributes of respect and love almost effusively bestowed and not unkind with tears of sorrow at the possibility of his going away.

"Action was taken unanimously urging and requesting his return carrying the appointment of a committee consisting of Mrs. W. B. Chew, Mrs. J. A. Beatty and Mrs. Clara Reutinger, which should present the expressed desire of the official board together with a large petition, signed by the membership already at hand to the district superintendent, Jesse Swank for his consideration.

"H. C. Aultman was chosen as secretary and instructed to send telegrams to Bishop Henderson and Dr. Swank and to prepare letters to be presented to the Methodist Conference now meeting in Toledo.

"(Signed) H. C. AULTMAN, 'Acting Secretary.'

A TRUE STORY!

A XENIA Merchant Grouped Muslin of Different Price and Quality All on the Same Table and labelled it 12-1-2c Cents A Yard.

CUSTOMERS, Selecting Muslin at the Bargain Price, Ignored High Grade Muslin which Originally Sold at 35 cents A Yard and bought A Cheaper but Better Known Brand

WHY?

The women who surrounded this bargain counter bought the cheaper brand because of its well known label.

As against all other muslins they had learned to believe that the muslin which bore this label was the best.

They had learned the value of this label on a piece of muslin in the school of advertising.

In this school, with the daily newspaper as the teacher, live merchants are able to direct the trend of buying.

AMERICAN DOUGHBOY'S PAY

Much has been written and said about the pay of the American soldier. No one claims it is attractive or commensurate with what one may earn in industry. When compared with the pay soldiers in other countries receive, however, it is found that the American doughboy is the best paid fighting man in the world.

As low as the American soldier's pay is, it is eleven times as much as the Japanese soldier gets, and the pay envelope of one American soldier contains enough money to pay off forty-one Italian or fifty-eight French soldiers for the same length of time. The yearly pay for an American soldier is $252; Great Britain, $240.98; Japan, $23; Italy, $20; and France, $4.38.

While the soldier belonging to Uncle Sam's army is the best paid, he is also the best fed fighting man in the world, according to a table just made public by the war department. According to the information given herein the average meal given the United States soldier would have to suffice for 1.4 British, 1.5 Japanese, 2.4 Italian, or 2.5 French fighters. That means he gets two and one-half times as much to eat as the French, nearly the two and one-half times as much as the Italian, one and one-half times as much as the British soldier.

JURIES NEGLECTING DUTY

There is an increasing frequency of jury verdicts—evidently of the compromise variety—to hold criminals guilty in degrees that are manifestly inconsistent with the evidence. This habit is to be charged to increasing sentimentality. It is becoming less and less unusual for those accused of offenses in higher degree—and who are evidently either guilty in that degree or innocent—to be found guilty of crime in lesser degree. Especially is this true in murder cases.

Such compromise verdicts are compromise of principle. Jurors who permit their sentiment or views relative to the severity and kind of punishment decreed by law to affect their verdict are false to their oaths. The penalty imposed is not their affair. They are not responsible for it. Nor have they any right to allow its consideration to enter into their verdict. The exercise of clemency is not in their Province. All that the jury can rightly consider is the evidence and the law of the case as instructed by the court. To allow other considerations to control their decision is to violate their solemn obligations to the court, to themselves and to society.

TRACKLESS LOCOMOTIVES

Interest in new inventions never ceases, and there seems to be no end of inventions. We have long been accustomed to the trolley cars running on the iron rails, but lately there has been a trackless trolley car—a car that retains the use of the central power station, with the current delivered through a trolley wire. It uses automobile wheels with pneumatic tires. This style of car has even become common in some localities. While it is not confined to the absolutely straight course followed by its predecessor, the street car, it must keep pretty close to it or it will get "off its trolley."

But now comes the astonishing information that a trackless locomotive has been invented which is propelled by its own gasoline plant, so that it can go where it pleases and wander from one side to the other side of the road as freely as desired. It has great speed, also, and this coupled with its weight gives it great momentum, which spells disaster to any other machine with which it might collide. We have become accustomed to the orthodox locomotive, and the location of most railroad crossings, so that we can avoid or ignore them as the disposition comes over us at the time, but if these new kind of locomotives are put to regular passenger service business, as some of its proponents inform us it will soon be, we shall never know when we are going to meet one coming around the corner, or bearing down upon us from a blind crossing.

Reckless motorists will probably hail this information with delight, for the present thrills of motoring are becoming passe for them. But the more timid ones will greet it with a sigh and wonder what is coming next to add to their driving woes.

New York

By Jack O'Donnell

Ben Bernie, who gets a few pieces of eight each night for shaking a stick at his Rialto orchestra, has coined a new way to snap his fingers. It's just an upward twist of the wrist, indicating that the time has come to applaud. A man has a pretty solid foothold in life when he holds the applause of a blase Broadway audience between his thumb and fingers.

The big new Anchor Line Caledonia was being warped into her slip at 14th Street pier recently, when she fouled a hawser of one of the French Line ships, due to an unavoidable juxtaposition in which the ocean giants occasionally find themselves.

Captain David W. Bone, skipper of the Caledonia and veteran of the sea, received shortly after the war a rather curt note from the French Line, written in French. Captain Bone is not without a resourceful nature—the natural concomitant of a salty existence. He called one of his officers whom he knew to be a student of the Irish and Scottish tongues. The next day the French Line received a courteous answer to their note—neatly and meticulously written in Gaelic.

One thing about the coal shortage—it doesn't bother the wails who live in New York's garrets and sheds and never know what it was to burn anything as luxurious as coal. These people know how to keep warm without settling miners' differences. They adopt a much simpler more ancient course of procedure. They take an old baby carriage, and go to the nearest building under construction, fill the carriage with scrap lumber, and return to toast their toes at a neat little wood fire, in the stove. Even this is not as jolly as it sounds when the nearest new building happens to be 40 city blocks away, and the thermometer is around zero, and the baby carriage has one wheel gone.

NEW DISHES THIS WEEK

American Chop Suey: (Requested by "Mrs. A. V.") Make this when you have a good supply of rich brown gravy on hand. (The Chop Suey will be called for in Wednesday night's dinner menu, so make plenty of brown gravy with the leg of lamb for tomorrow night's dinner.) Fry one cup of sliced raw onions in three tablespoons of butter till a light brown, and then add one quart of brown gravy left over from a roast of lamb (or from roast beef, pork or chicken). Also add one cup of lamb left-overs diced (or beef, pork, or chicken) and when this boils, stir in one pint measure of the poorer parts of celery cut very fine (not the greens, but the thin white ends of the stalks). Simmer till the celery is tender, then add one cup of crisp, diced uncooked celery (the better parts) and a can of the best grade of mushrooms. Cook ten minutes longer, but do not let boil. (It is best to cook it in the top of a double boiler). Season to taste with salt and pepper. Serve in a border of boiled rice (which is a potato substitute, therefore no potatoes are needed in the dinner).

Vinegar Poached Eggs: The housewife who has once poached eggs in this way, will never poach them in any other. Fill a deep frying pan with boiling water; add one-half cup of vinegar. When it boils again, slip the eggs into it (from a saucer on which you have dropped them from the shell). Let poach as you ordinarily do. The only difference will be in the milky consistency of the egg white, the depth of the poached eggs, and the firmness of the egg which keeps the yolk from breaking in the water. Season to suit taste, and serve. Children do not notice the slight suggestion of vinegar about these eggs, and grown-ups find them more delicious for that flavor.

Baked Slice of Ham. Soak two pounds of ham (sliced one inch thick) in warm water for one hour, then drain, place it in a baking dish or casserole, sprinkle

VAIN EXCUSES

Tell them you lost and let it go. Forget the vain excuses. There's nothing good on earth below.

That whimpering produces. 'Tis proper failure to admit. But waste no time explaining it.

The world will not believe your wail. However you may word it. You cannot tell a hard luck tale.

But what we all have heard it. Say that the better player won. That stands when all is said and done.

Stand up and play the game and be a fighter clean and plucky. But should you lose the victory.

Don't call the winner lucky. Defeat's a bitter dose, you say. You cannot talk the taste away.

And, boy, remember to the end. Excuses set men grinning. 'Twere better far that time to spend.

On plans for future winning. To failure, when you must, submit. But waste no words explaining it.

Today's Talk

INSTRUMENTS

I watched a worker in a yard the other day. He was using a sickle to trim the grass. When the job was finished, everything looked beautiful and the shrubbery got the wind and sunshine to better advantage.

This sickle could be used to cut down the reaching branches of lovely flowers and bushes that add to the landscape. But in the hands of one who loved beauty it was used only to beautify.

We are instruments in the hand of an unseen Teacher. How often we use the instruments at our command with blundering hand.

And yet I am sure that that great Teacher understands our intentions, so that though we may be so deeply unworthy, whenever a good act or thought leaves this bodily machine that Teacher sees that it accomplishes its best good, as though it came from one far better and able.

How far that little "candle throws his beams!" In fact we never know how far just the simplest kind thought or casual service is going to go. Many men have labored an entire life-time and left but a few scattered sentences of inspiration or noble thought, or perhaps a single poem or book. And yet on and on that something from the heart and soul of its creator travels and lodges in places where light is craved.

So often the instruments at our command get weather touched. We need fresh, clean air in our lungs to give us robust health.

And so in our heart we need a Visitor very often to breathe into its chambers new light and fragrance so that the instruments of the heart may efficiently perform.

It is far better to perform imperfectly with good intent than to have good intent and perform not at all.

It's the part of you that you leave behind that enriches the world—the work of what instruments you possessed.

The Theatre

With the opening of the musical comedy season the announcement comes from the Gus Sun Booking Exchange Co., Springfield, that shows this season will outdo anything in the way of miniature musical shows offered heretofore.

Producers of miniature musical comedy shows are keen in realizing that it will take more than the ordinary show to get by this season, and, with that thought in mind, are surrounding themselves with a caliber of talent seldom seen in this popular class of entertainment. Principals who have commanded salaries ranging as high as $200 weekly will be seen in rosters of musical comedies playing the Gus Sun Circuit this season.

Homer Neer, general manager of the circuit, has worked out a plan which will insure the circuit a high standard of attractions throughout the entire season. By adding eleven-people shows to the circuit, a variety of musical shows, both in size and entertainment will be offered, establishing a new era.

Toronto Beauty Replaces Carey With Pirates

Herman Layne, outfielder of the Toronto Internationals, is to take the place of the deposed Max Carey of the Pirates, according to a report that the Pittsburgh team has paid $30,000 for the brilliant youngster whose batting average stands at .354 and who is said to sparkle all over the diamond.

There will be no evening performance Sept. 16 and no matinee Sept. 17, at the Ritz Theater, New York. A. H. Woods, whose production of "Potash and Perlmutter, Detectives," opens at that house this week, has made such provision in his contract for the theater as a result of an agreement with one of his featured players, Ludwig Satz, who made it plain before accepting the engagement that he would not appear during the twenty-four hour period of the Day of Atonement. The producer appealed to the Actors' Equity Association for permission to deduct two-eighths from salaries of the cast, but the petition was denied.

The Shuberts are preparing to send a company of "Princess Flavia" on road again, this season, and have assigned Howard Marsh to head the troupe, which will open September 9 in Rochester, N. Y.

Many of the original "Big Boy" Company have been re-engaged to support Al Jolson when he resumes his tour in the piece September 13 in Boston.

Surviving are her husband, Theodore Paullin, Jamestown; one son, Carl Paullin, Kendallville, Ind.; one daughter, Mrs. Charles Reeder, Jamestown, and her stepfather, J. D. Ritenour, Stamford, Ill., and two sisters, Mrs. Henry Rumsell, also of Stamford, and Mrs. W. B. Tryon, Grand Rapids, Mich.

"Mitzi, I want you to listen to this," implores Dad. "Think of it, Kansas City is the second largest stock market in the world." Mitzi replies, that she thinks it's too lovely for words. Her reply, of course, being about her new negligee. "Anyway, Dad," says Mitzi, "we'll go out and I'll show you a thing or two."

"Don't you love it," urges Mitzi to Dad. Poor Dad he doesn't want to commit himself. Maybe she means the Bell Telephone Building they are passing, maybe she means the wicked looking blonde. She refers, of course, to the costume the lady is wearing. It's built on bolero lines. The collar is mannishly made.

"Look," stage whispers Mitzi nudging Dad somewhere in the ribs. "Look, a French felt hat and I have heard they are all the rage! Women have them in all colors, you know, but all the same style." Dad can't seem to work up quite the same enthusiasm but he doesn't wish to be poked so he notices as he is told to.

They had to go to a store to get something Mitzi had forgotten. There is a practical demonstration going on in the lingerie department to which Dad feels he is not invited. They are showing how the lace motifs are clapped around the knees garter fashion give the effect of decorated hose. When Mitzi takes Dad out to see sights—she shows 'em to him.

MEDICAL SPRINGS

Yellow Springs, the seat of Antioch College, takes its name from the medical springs found there. Formerly they were much visited and ample hotel accommodations were provided for invalids. Early in the century travellers often spoke of the place. The noted Duke of Saxe-Weimer, who was there in 1824, says in his travels:

"The spring originates in a limestone rock. The water has a little taste of iron and deposits a great quantity of ochre, from which it takes its name. The spring is said to give 110 gallons of water per minute, which is received in a basin surrounded by cedar trees."

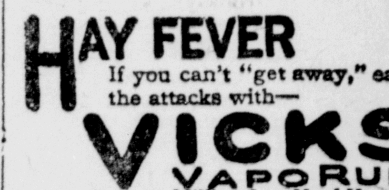

"The yellow stream which comes from the basin runs a short distance over a bed of limestone and is afterwards precipitated into the valley."

"These limestone rocks form very singular figures on the edge of this valley; the detached pieces resemble the Devil's Wall of the Hartz."

MYSTERY TEAMS DOT PACIFIC COAST AS GRID SEASON NEARS

BERKELEY, Cal., Sept. 2.—While Stanford and the University of Southern California, because of their veteran machines, loom as the most formidable contenders for the coast conference grid title, a half dozen "mystery" teams from the Pacific Northwest present such a threat—that difficulty has been encountered in attempting to pick this year's winner with any degree of certainty.

For a number of years University of California walked away with first honors until it was finally taken for granted before opening of conference games, that the Bears would repeat. But with California's upset last year and signs of an even weaker team this coming season the other schools have thrown off their inferiority complex.

One of the most bitterly contested scrambles for the title in the history of coast conference play is considered certain.

Stanford and U. S. C., both strong last year are stronger this season. Excepting the sensational fullback Ernie Nevers, Coach "Pop" Warner at Stanford lost virtually no one by graduation. Warner is grooming "Hank" Millage to fill Nevers' shoes.

Last year's U. S. C. team of regulars is virtually intact again. Barring injuries it is certain to be a blacker threat than last year, and it was a dangerous team then.

Coach "Nibs" Price, successor to the late Andy Smith at University of California will endeavor to rebuild practically an entire team lost by graduation last June. California's outlook is not believed encouraging.

But the Northwest is teeming with "dark horses." The Oregon Aggies, with Coach Paul Schissler, present a team of regulars who have battled together for three years. Among them is the sensational ground gainer, Schulmerich.

With a new coach, Major Frank Milburn, a new spirit, and "Bill" Kelly, captain and quarterback, a whole team in himself, Montana University looks dangerous.

Coach John McEwan at Oregon University will have a stronger team than that which sprang a late-season surprise last year by holding the tramping Washington University champions to a 15-to-14 victory.

Washington rated this year as the best in the Northwest will probably have the best line in the conference. Coach Bagshaw's only "nightmare" is replacing Tesreau and Wilson in the backfield.

Last year Idaho built up a new team, The Vandals should be roaring at full blast this season.

Washington State's team will be light and inexperienced. To what extent this outfit will develop under the fighting spirit of Coach Hollingberry will be seen in its toughest game of the season, against U. S. C., early in October.

It appears to critics as if the Pacific Coast conference is in for one of the wildest title battles in years.

Mighty With the Lowly

Bill Regan, infielder purchased from the Columbus A. A. team, is one of the men who have put life in the Boston Red Sox, now showing some results of the efforts extended by Lee Fohl to rebuild the shattered club.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Predictions made by C. C. Pyle that professional tennis can be put over in this country are not as idle as the United States Lawn Tennis Association wishes to believe.

Because it never has been done before it does not follow that "open tennis" could not become as popular and as respected as "open golf."

Tex Rickard has been considering the possibilities of professional tennis for several years and when he had the plans drawn for his new garden he arranged lighting features with the game in mind.

"If I could get a couple of good players to turn professional I could put it over," Rickard said more than a year ago. "There might not be a lot of money in it at first but it looks like a game that could be sold to the public in time."

Pyle made a smart move when he succeeded in getting Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen to turn professional. When he announced that he was going to France with a contract for the French star, he was laughed at, but he came back with the contract.

When he announced that he had secured a number of other prominent players to join his troupe he was also given the merry ha, ha, but he may fool the officials again.

It is highly improbable that Helen Wills, who forfeited her championship this year, ever will turn professional but there are a number of other high ranking American players who are considering offers.

The plea made by Mlle. Lenglen that she had worked long enough for tennis and that she was going to let tennis work for her in the future will find sympathy with several American players who have given plenty of their time to the development of the game at a personal sacrifice of time and money.

It is understood that Pyle has made an offer to William T. Tilden and it would not be a shock if he announced after the national championship tournament that he had decided to turn professional. He has had enough of glory out of the game and he is also in a position where tennis might be called upon to work for him.

It is hardly likely that Billy Johnston would give up his amateur standing and Vinnie Richards isn't a very good prospect for pro.

LISTENING TO VACATION TALES-MAKES WORKING DIFFICULT IN LATE SUMMER

Vacations have their advantages and their drawbacks.

The advantages are with those who are so situated they are able to enjoy possibly two weeks of leisure. The drawbacks are, in the opinion of the less fortunate ones, the ordeal of listening to other vacationists spin their yarns.

Listening to the returning vacationist telling about what he did, where he went, whom he met, how much he spent and how he liked it is one of the favorite indoor sports in every office and store these days.

Vacations, however, wouldn't be vacations unless there were, after the return, those happy hours when you can tell your friends and acquaintances about your trip, which was the best vacation under the best weather conditions at the best resort that ever happened.

Maybe the weather was worse than usual; maybe better; the hotel prices were higher; seldom lower; the crop of young heiresses and handsome millionaires was exceedingly good this year.

The vacationists are returning now, at least a majority of them. Every Monday morning finds a few more of them back in their offices, proudly exhibiting sun-burned shoulders and noses, stretching and yawning, and ready at any time to launch into a recital of their experiences.

Joe, the shipping clerk, sheik'd every girl that wandered within a mile of him. Genevieve, the demon typist had three or four young millionaires gasping for breath and fighting duels with each other on the beach at day break, and Mr. Jones, the boss, shot three birdies, had a hole in one, and landed the biggest fish ever taken out of the lake. Uh-huh.

It's hard enough to do your work on a hot day in August, but when some bird is expounding the glories of salt water bathing or audibly basking in the memories of moonlight canoe rides at the next desk; just try and do it. If you have already had your vacation you are sorry it is over and if it is still to come, you simply can't wait for it. And you can't help but listen to him. It seems part of the etiquette of vacations that the returning traveler can tell you anything and you are bound to believe him. Particularly if he is the boss.

Nor does 5 o'clock bring relief. You are greeted at the door of your peaceful home by friend wife, who is overflowing with an account of the glorious motor camping trip the Smiths took.

But cheer up,—it can't last much longer. There will be a few more weeks of it, but after that it will be up to you to plan your vacation for next year's vacations, which will be about March 1.

RAIN INTERFERES WITH RESERVES AND MERCHANTS IN TIE

Rain smacked both ball teams for a row of Japanese ashears at the Washington St. yard Sunday afternoon when the Reserves and Merchants were collaborating on their third contest to decide the city title.

The elements opened up an angry protest while the score was tied at one and one, driving the athletes from the diamond after four and one-half innings of play. The advent of the rainfall spoiled what had started out to be an ambitious pitchers' duel and left the championship argument at just where it was a week ago—evenly divided.

The Reserves, sensing the possibility of a downpour, went out early after the contest, scoring their lone run in the initial stanza. H. Frank was safe on a fielders' choice and stole second. B. Frank fled out to Ward but Shuey came through with a single that plated H. Frank with the first run. Durnbaugh whiffed for the final out.

The Merchants made up for this discrepancy in the fourth when Ward deftly singled to right and did some handsome base running in order to tie the score. He stole second, took third on Kirksey's sacrifice fly to Valentine and scored on Anderson's infield out a moment later. This ended the protechnics as all enthusiasm was dampened by a down pour.

Herman for the Reserves and Harris for the Merchants seemed to be breezing along ably when the rain started. Harris had permitted but two hits while Herman was touched for three in the half game. Harris fanned four and Herman one during the festivities.

WILLIAM TELL AND THE APPLE

Having had dried apple soup for supper this evening, I am reminded of one of the most terrible stories in all the world. Almost as terrible as the dried apple soup I had. Let us re-view the tale of William Tell and the apple.

Many hundreds of years ago, before a teapot had a dome, there was a cruel Austrian governor named Gessler, who placed his hat on the limb of a sour apple tree and ordered all the people to pass by and bow to it. And all the country-side saluted the headgear.

Aha, along came a tall spaghetti-like fellow, who passed up the lid. His name was William Tell and it didn't take him very long to tell Gessler that he wouldn't walk under the hat for sanitary reasons.

Gessler was angry. Golly, he was sore. He knew that Tell was some shot with the bow and arrow, so he brought Tell's son out and placed an apple on the kid's head. He then told Tell he might go free, if he would hit the apple. Tell didn't want to attempt it, but the kid begged him to try his luck.

So William pulled back on his bow. He knew he was nervous, so he decided to shoot in the air over the kid's dome. The arrow flew through the air. The apple fell from the head of the boy. Gessler thought he had hit the apple.

But a strange thing had happened. There had been two great big, fat juicy, fluffy-duffy worms in the apple. One happened to look out just as Tell took aim. Sensing the danger, he told the other worm to go one way for safety while he went the other. They thus left a big hole in the center just as if an arrow had passed through it. And as they crawled out they knocked the apple off the boy's head.

Having no more arrows, Tell went fiddling the time away on his bow and gave the world the "William Tell" overture.

"TRUTH IN ADVERTISING" SLOGAN NOW
RAPIDLY BECOMING UNIVERSALLY USED

Nowhere is the expression "honesty is the best policy" better exemplified than in advertising and the fake advertiser has found the public is no longer as gullible as it once was.

Better Business bureaus throughout the country in the past few years, by keeping a constant eye open for all manner of advertising frauds, have been successful in eliminating almost entirely the tricks and exaggerations that characterized some kinds of publicity years ago.

Advertising men are the authority for the statement the present work of the bureau is largely that of watching for unintentional mis-statements. Advertisers are rapidly coming to the realization that honesty is the only policy that pays big dividends and those who desire to defraud the public are becoming fewer and fewer.

Some schemes formerly in use are familiar to everybody. For instance one time a company advertised a sure exterminator for vermin with such phrases as "Kill two nicely polished wood blocks on one of which was printed "Place bug on this block," and another saying "Press with this block."

Then there were those ads which offered you a steel engraving of George Washington for ten cents, and sent you a two-cent stamp when you unwarily let them get their fingers on your dime.

Many people also "bit" on the advertisements of a full set of furniture for a nine by twelve room at a cost of $2. You lost the $2 and got a set of old furniture for a room nine by twelve inches.

Even that old gag of promising to keep a horse from slobbering and extruding a dollar for the instruction "Teach him to spit" was actually worked.

At present some of the cheap magazines allow schemes almost as bad as these to be exploited in their pages, but the reputable publisher is careful of the copy that he accepts. Some persons with flexible consciences are still making money out of fake cures for baldness, "make you beautiful" medicines, and various cure-alls, but they are gradually being driven out of business.

FORMER XENIA MINISTER WILL ASK FOR CHURCH RETIREMENT

The Rev. H. J. Jewett former pastor of Trinity Church, this city, now pastor of Oxford M. E. Church, Dayton, will ask for retirement from the ministry owing to ill health of himself and Mrs. Jewett, at the annual West Ohio Conference which is in session in Toledo this week.

The Rev. Mr. Jewett served Trinity Church for several years and was very popular as a pastor while here. He went from Xenia to Dayton as pastor of Broadway M. E. Church, and a year ago was transferred to the pastorate of the Oxford church. He was largely responsible for the Billy Sunday evangelistic campaign in Dayton as chairman of the evangelistic committee of Dayton Council of Churches at the time the evangelist was invited to come to Dayton to conduct a revival. He entered the Central Ohio conference in 1893 and besides Dayton and Xenia has served churches in Lima and Toledo.

The report of the Rev. Jesse Swank, superintendent of the Dayton district to the West Ohio Conference, contains, besides the resignation and request for retirement of the Rev. Mr. Jewett, the resignations of Dr. V. F. Brown as pastor of Trinity Church, Xenia, and of Dr. F. W. Stanton, pastor of First Church, this city. Dr. Brown will be assigned to another pastorate by the conference heads, but Dr. Stanton is asking for temporary retirement in order to rest for a year at the new home he is building in Franklin. Dr. Stanton is taking his first leave of retirement since he entered the ministry thirty-five years ago. Dr. Brown was formerly pastor of Raper M. E. Church, Dayton. He has been a member of the Cincinnati conference now merged with the West Ohio conference since 1879.

The report of Dr. Swank also mentions another former Xenian, the Rev. Roger Turrell, son of the late Rev. Albert C. Turrell, of Xenia, who succeeded the late Dr. Green as pastor of Trinity Church, Dayton.

Fairfield and Osborn, the superintendent's report shows, now have over $10,000 in subscriptions towards the remodeling of their church and the contract will soon be let and the work commenced. Because of proximity to the flying field and constantly increasing population the need for enlarging the church was so great that it was found necessary even at a great sacrifice the report says.

OHIO'S SEEDS COST
TEN MILLION EACH YEAR IS LEARNED

The farm value of the seed required to plant Ohio's eleven million acres of the six major crops, corn, hay, wheat, oats, rye, and soybeans, is over ten million dollars.

Care of seeds is easy and cheap, says M. T. Meyers, of the department of farm crops at the Ohio State University. In Crop Talk, published monthly by the University, compared with what the loss in yield may be when inferior seed is sown. Dry seeds in storage are safe. But they do not live forever.

The longest living seeds of which there is any authentic record were some water-lily seeds in a peat bed in China for 200 years. The seeds had hard coats like the clovers, to seal them against the action of air and water. When the coats of the water-lily seeds were broken and water admitted, they germinated 100 per cent into strong vigorous seedlings.

In crop plants, Mr. Meyers points out, there is nothing anywhere near approaching this. In Colorado alfalfa seeds have germinated ninety per cent after twenty-five years in storage. The extreme life of wheat under any condition is probably not much over twenty years.

Wheat which is said to have grown after 2000 years burial in the Egyptian pyramids; the corn supposed to have grown after being taken from the mounds of the mound builders—these, says Mr. Meyers, are simply frauds.

Bandmaster's Daughter Gambles
Love Against $100,000; Wins Both

Romance wins again—as usual. When his daughter Marie showed indications of unusual talent, Bohumir Kryl, the famous bandmaster and cornet virtuoso, settled $100,000 on her with the stipulation that she should not marry before she reached the age of thirty. Marie is now a famous pianist, well under thirty—and in love with a handsome Greek nobleman, Spiro Hadja-Kariakos. She intends to marry. And after much remonstrance, Kryl has relented. And Marie promises to keep up her music. Photos show Marie and (insets) her fiance (left) and her father.

In 1860 Ohio had 2,946 miles of railroad. By 1890, the total was 5,732 miles and by 1900 it was 8,807. In 1910 and 1920 the total mileage was more than 9,000. Since then it has shown some decrease.

The total mileage of railroads in the United States is about 250,000. Texas has 16,000 miles, which is more than any other state.

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

ROSILYN RIDGEWAY learns on her wedding day from idle gossip that she has been married for her money. Before her enormous fortune was left her, she had been an over-worked little drudge in her father's inn. LANDIS RIDGEWAY, her husband is a brilliant, fascinating man, who was forced into the marriage by his mother. Rosilyn, loving her husband, knows he is still in love with LYDIA HARBROOK, a beautiful, cold society girl who is bent on marrying.

STEVIE VAN VORST, a wealthy old roue, although she is really fond of Ridgeway.

RUPERT BRISCOE, a dissipated man of the world, has seen Rosilyn but once, and yet is deeply interested in her. Lydia learns of this interest, and she and Briscoe concoct a plot whereby Rosilyn and Briscoe will see a great deal of each other, and Lydia will have a chance to exert her wiles upon Landis. The plan works, and Landis, finding himself often alone with Lydia falls under her spell once more.

Van Vorst, however, hungering for her love, decides to use MARIETTA FERNANDEZ, a dancer and sweetheart of Briscoe's in connection with a scheme. These two come to New York where Marietta begins to vamp Landis away from Lydia, leaving a clear field for the elderly schemer.

In the country at the Ridgeway place, Rosilyn, in a fever of jealousy and anxiety over the protracted disappearance of her husband seeks the solace of the countryside. After an exciting adventure she is rescued by Briscoe who tells a "fishy" story to account for his proximity to the scene. Soon after Landis effects a reconciliation with Rosilyn and becomes his old lovable self. The latter discovers damning evidence against Lydia and exerts her power to secure the upper hand—in the city meanwhile Marietta feels her power over Briscoe declining.

Torn by jealousy, Marietta surreptitiously sees Rosilyn and makes an ambiguous declaration of love.

Walking away the dancer stumbles into an underground passage where she finds Briscoe surrounded by incriminating evidence. The latter suspects treachery.

Her sweetheart persuades Marietta to leave the vicinity while he speeds back to Royal Cliff where a liquor revel is under way at the pool. Lydia leads the merry-makers. Afterwards, Lydia contrives to get herself and Landis marooned on an island for the night.

CHAPTER 65

A Phone Call

"I am disgusted with Lydia Harbrook," said Mrs. Ridgeway, Senior to her daughter-in-law, after Lydia's all-night escapade with Landis on the island. "I am more disgusted than words can express. When she came back at eight o'clock this morning, I'd have ordered her from the house, had I been in your shoes!"

"They couldn't have helped it. The boat drifted off with the tide. Such things do happen."

"Lydia was at the bottom of all that!"

"Landis is fearfully upset and worried about it all," defended Rosilyn staunchly. "And of course it's on Miss Harbrook that the scandal really falls."

Mrs. Ridgeway Senior snorted. "Her shoulders are broad enough to bear it! Don't you worry!"

And she went on to tell her daughter-in-law how one of the maids had found a syringe in the visitor's room, and how she herself—suspicious—had searched there until she found a little packet containing a whitish powder.

The local drug-store proprietor had identified the stuff as cocaine! "I've often wondered," she continued, nodding sagely, "how Lydia managed to maintain such tremendously high spirits? And I've also puzzled over her sudden fits of depression and silence? This explains it!"

"Don't tell anyone," said Rosilyn quickly and generously. "She intends to give the habit up. I mean—that is—"

And the girl broke off, vexed that she had inadvertently let slip the other's secret. "So you know about it? Then why on earth didn't you tell Landis?"

Rosilyn flushed vexedly. "It would be such a mean—advantage." Then, conscious of the oddity of this remark, since she was Landis' wife, she added, hurriedly:

"I am sorry for Miss Harbrook. 'Spare your pity for a worthier object! She has small mercy on you, my child. Not that you need think there's anything between her and my son! He may have been indiscreet—and most men are wax in the hands of a pretty and designing mix, like Lydia!—but he is honorable."

And the haughty dame stooped suddenly and kissed her young daughter-in-law with tears in her proud, dark eyes.

Rosilyn was touched. Thrilled, too, by the other's words.

But indeed she had been hurt by Landis' escapade. That the incident was on every idle, chattering tongue made it all the harder, for pride was wounded.

"Mr. Briscoe and he have gone to New York today. I'm sure it's because Landis wants to avoid Lydia," said the mother. "They're both returning tomorrow, and I think, they're hoping Lydia will be gone. I shall give her a broad hint."

"Most of the crowd are due to leave today," replied Rosilyn. "On the whole, last night's party was a huge success."

"Except for the cocktail raft," the other supplemented, with a little 'moue' of distaste. "But we know who engineered that! Be hemianism can be carried too far."

The young hostess went off to look up trains, and attend to her guests, and give the orders for the day.

Her thoughts dwelt on Landis. Rupert Briscoe had been vexed for her sake over the wagging tongues of gossip.

He had indicated, with virtuous and yet not overdone disapproval, that a check ought to be put on a husband's straying.

Under the influence of that sympathy, Rosilyn had confided in him the tale of the Spanish dancer's visit to Royal Cliff and the queer, distraught way in which the foreign girl had wandered off.

"She was so unhappy. I'm afraid she may do herself an injury. Her face haunts me. It was so beautiful, so tragic. I can still see her big, mournful eyes, with a whole world of sorrow behind them."

If she had seen Briscoe's face at that moment, subsequent events would not have happened.

But when her gaze did light on him at last, those handsome features of his were masklike.

"I wouldn't worry. He spoke in staccato tones. 'Landis can't help being attracted to these women—though a hint not to lead her on any further mightn't be amiss. As you say, Marietta Fernandez might do herself an injury, for these foreigners are all emotion, all impulse.'"

That had been all. But Rosilyn was sore at heart.

Most of the guests left after luncheon, and at half past six a 'long distance' telephone-call came from New York.

"I wanted Landis to return with me to Royal Cliff tonight," came the suave tones of Briscoe on the wire, addressed to Rosilyn, "but it seem he's keen on a theatrical party to be given in a flat in town. I think it's best to stick by him—so expect us back tomorrow, will you? And forgive my calling up, but I thought it might relieve your mind."

Relieve her mind? reflected Rosilyn, with bitterness of spirit. Her thoughts went, in direct sequence to the Spanish dancing girl. Was it at her flat that the party was to be given?

Unblemished SKIN

Gives You confidence

HOW conscious we are of our skin! Even one little pimple or blackhead will so embarrass us that we want to hide right away. And eczema, boils, blotches and rashes! Why, these awful things simply destroy all our ambition!

But what confidence we have in ourselves if our skin is clear and unblemished—free from any eruptions or breaking out! A clear skin is one of the greatest possessions in the world—and it is so easy to have it. All that is necessary is to keep our systems full of rich, red, pure blood. S. S. S. helps Nature build this blood. And the impurities that cause these so-called skin disorders are driven right out of the system.

If you want the kind of skin that captivates men and compels the admiration of other women, just remember that you can't have it if your blood is impoverished. But, just build red-blood-cells in your blood with S. S. S. and your dream of a soft, rosy, velvet skin, clear of blemishes, will be realized. Then notice the difference in the way you feel.

S. S. S. has proven for generations that it helps Nature build the rich, red blood that makes beautiful skin and healthy bodies. Let S. S. S. prove it for you.

Get S. S. S. from any drug store. And get the larger bottle. It's more economical.

UNCLAIMED HONORS

Vacation scatters people in all directions to camps, on auto trips, lake trips, and visits, and most of us are so engrossed in enjoying the precious, fleeting, leisure hours that even pursuing honors from the work-a-day time of year do not burden our minds.

So it is with some of the contestants in the County Library Essay contest, awards for which were given at the County Fair. Small sums of money, or ribbons, or perhaps both, still await Miss Jane Harner, Miss Ruth Hutchison, Miss Dorothy Norckauer, and Miss Ruth White.

The awards are ready in sealed envelopes for the claimants and may be had by calling at the home of Mrs. P. H. Flynn, 131 N. Detroit St., Xenia.

All who entered the contest have had the fun of expressing themselves about the value of a library and may have in addition the satisfaction of having contributed a worthy part to the success of the Greene County Fair

The Board of Governors of the Greene County Library have only one regret in regard to the essay contest. Some schools in the county did not take part in it and others in which essays were written failed to send the essays in to the judges or even to let the committee know that pupils had contributed essays. The contest was on this account necessarily incomplete.

Home Plans Huge Building Program

LEGISLATURE WILL BE ASKED TO SUPPLY HOSPITAL, NURSERY

New Cottages and Repair Of Others Also Planned

A new hospital, nursery and four additional cottages, are contained in a building program for the O. S. and S. O. Home for which an appropriation of approximately $500,000 is to be asked of the legislature at its next session by the board of trustees.

The budget for the next six months to be presented to the legislature at its coming session will include the request for this appropriation, according to Superintendent T. E. Andrews. Announcement of the proposed improvement plan was made following the September meeting of the trustees which concluded Sunday afternoon when preparation of the budget was commenced.

Besides the proposed new buildings the appropriation sought is to cover cost of new wiring, new plumbing and new stairways in the twenty original cottages at the Home.

The medical advisory staff of the Home and the Ohio Department of the American Legion are backing the improvement plan, according to Superintendent Andrews. The Legion is interested in the plan through its welfare work for children of World War veterans because before many years the major part of the population of the institution will be composed of children of that war. Spanish-American War veterans now have the majority of children in the Home with a few orphans of Civil War veterans whose activities gave Ohio the Home more than half a century ago still in the institution.

The medical advisory staff is interested in obtaining better hospital facilities. The main hospital building was erected in 1888 and is obsolete, it is said. Four cottage wards are maintained in connection with it. According to Superintendent Andrews the idea is to build a hospital along the general plan of the McClellan Hospital on a smaller scale.

There are twenty-six cottages in use at the Home. Six of these are double cottages, five of which were built twenty years or more ago and one of which is a building originally intended for a hospital, which was later converted into a cottage.

The contemplated nursery building is intended for children under four years of age who are not now received at the Home. A number of years ago when the state bought the Sullivan farm, formerly the Meredith place, adjoining the Home farm on the west, it was intended to use the large homestead on the farm for a nursery. After a short time it was abandoned for a short time when it was found unsuitable and too remote from the institution proper. The house is now rented and is occupied by the family of Prof. W. S. Sackett, superintendent of schools at the Home.

COLUMBUS STORE ROBBED BY BANDITS

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 6.—Three burglars handcuffed the day watchman in the Boston clothing store here today, blew a safe on the fifth floor and escaped with several hundred dollars. The yeggs who had entered the store through an unlocked window lay in waiting for Clyde Rawlings, the watchman, and leaped upon him as he made his rounds. They disarmed Rawlings and handcuffed him to an elevator cage.

When the trio broke open the safe on the fifth floor and looted it, Rawlings finally freed himself and gave the alarm after wrenching loose a bar of the elevator cage.

REBELLION HALTED WHEN DISGRUNTLED OFFICERS ARE HELD

All Officers Of Artillery Suspended As Disciplinary Act

MADRID, Sept. 6.—All Spain was under martial law today as a result of efforts of certain military groups to prevent enforcement of governmental decrees.

All artillery officers have been suspended from office and two of the higher ranking officers were arrested in an effort to prevent rebellion which the disgruntled officers threatened to wage against the government of General Primo de Rivera.

King Alfonso made a night trip from his summer home, San Sebastian, to Madrid by motor to confer with De Rivera before the martial law decree was signed and promulgated.

Madrid was calm last night and the government had not indicated the existence of disorder elsewhere.

An official communique explained the sudden imposition of martial law by citing the dissatisfaction in the artillery corps which according to the communique, had culminated in "acts of real indiscipline." The commandant of the artillery corps is alleged yesterday to have ordered all his officers to return to their regiments. The duke of Tetuan, who is minister of war, had no knowledge of this order. The artillery commander at Segovia without knowledge of the minister, ordered his troops concentrated at headquarters to be prepared "in the event that other troops from Madrid might attack them."

These two overt acts caused General De Rivera to decide upon martial law as the only means of controlling the situation. Both the artillery commandant and the commanding officer at Segovia were arrested.

Both King Alfonso and De Rivera signed the following decree of martial law:

"In accordance with the decision of the council of ministers, martial law is proclaimed throughout Spain and also in the Balearic and Canary Islands. All who oppose or resist the government's orders in connection with the present decree will be considered rebels in the face of the enemy and will be judged by summary jurisdiction. All persons will be considered equally implicated who help such opposition or resistance, directly or indirectly, and also who refuse assistance to the government in dealing with resistance."

The decree dismissing the artillery officers excludes those in Morocco because "their conception of duty certainly will prevent them from committing the faults which necessitated this decree."

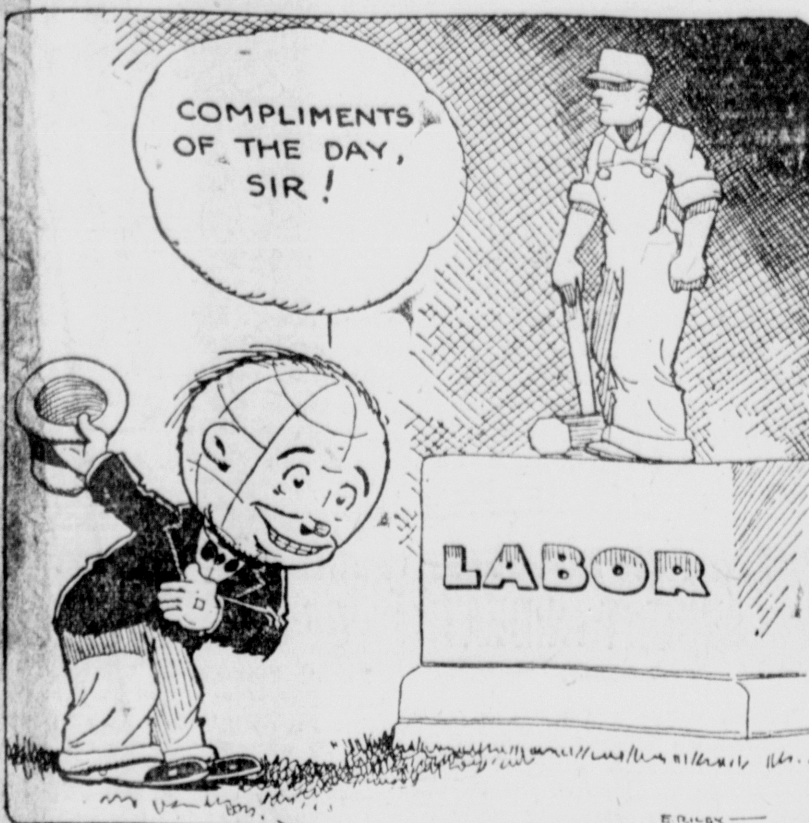

The government subsequently issued a communique in which it was asserted that the crisis had passed with the submission of the officers involved.

HENDAYE, France, Spanish Frontier, Sept. 6.—According to apparently authoritative news from across the border the entire Spanish army today was ready to rebel against the dictatorship of General Primo de Rivera who three years ago this month seized control of the government of Spain. Enlisted men of the army were making common cause with the officers, especially artillery officers, according to the reports.

Military unrest in Spain was caused by General De Rivera's army reforms, especially directed against the wealthy and socially powerful artillery officers. The dictator decreed three months that the old system of promoting officers strictly according to seniority should be superseded by promotion by merit.

In various ways the artilleryists subsequently have sought to prevent enforcement of this decree. There have been portents of trouble in Spain during the past few months. Last week a delegation representing the artillery officers called on De Rivera and demanded that he resign. Earlier in the summer General Valeriano Weyler, eighty-seven years old, and famous in the United States as the military governor of Cuba before the Spanish American war, was arrested for his part in an abortive revolution. Half a dozen prominent men were arrested on the same charge.

INDUSTRY STOPS TO HONOR WORKING MAN ON LABOR DAY

LABOR DAY belied its name Monday for few labored.

Industry's wheels stopped and the entire United States paused in its activities to pay homage to one of the great factors in the country's development, the laboring man.

Banks, building and loan associations, the postoffice and city and county offices observed the holiday, the last of the summer season.

No community celebration was planned in connection with recognition of the day in Xenia but citizens individually took note of the occasion.

The American worker is better off than any other worker in the world. He has better food, better clothes, more leisure and more luxuries. In other words, he has shared widely in the nation's prosperity for which he is in no small way responsible. His importance in the national scheme of things

HISTORY OF LABOR DAY

- 1882—First parade of the Knights of Labor in New York City.
- 1884—Repetition of the above parade. Resolution passed by the organization to hold all parades on the first Monday in September.
- 1887—Labor Day made a legal holiday in Colorado by act of the legislature March 15.
- 1890—Labor parades held in Europe May 1 and for years were violently opposed because they were believed to be radical.
- 1887—Establishment of Labor Day as a holiday throughout the United States, territories and 1926 possessions, and in Canada.

is emphasized by this yearly observance of Labor Day.

Last spring a committee of British workmen visited the United States and Canada to determine the secret of labor's high position in this country. This expedition, sponsored by the London Daily Mail, visited many of our great industrial centers and studied conditions there.

They discovered that high wages were the result of great productivity, which in turn came from cheap power, efficient operation, abundant natural resources, and highly organized methods of production.

The extensive use of electricity and other forms of power has revolutionized production and enabled the worker to produce far more than he could by hand, and so make much more money. Sanitary working conditions and modern, well-lighted factories further aid the efficiency of the laborer.

These British visitors were surprised to find the American worker living in a house with hardwood floors, a tiled bathroom, a telephone and radio. They found hundreds of automobiles parked around the factories here. They found the wives of the workers doing their work quickly and efficiently with modern labor-saving appliances and their children going to college.

The American laboring man realizes all this and so he takes a day off in September and celebrates.

TWIN SISTERS SWIM HUDSON FOR 17 MILES AS TEST FOR CHANNEL

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Two sisters, blonde twins and twelve years old were studying a map of the English channel at their home today, after having shown New York that they could do an "Ederle."

Arm over arm, swimming the crawl stroke in unison, the two flaxen haired girls swam down the Hudson from Yonkers to the Battery yesterday, a distance of seventeen miles.

"It was easy," Phyllis Zitenfield, said as she left the water off Lower Broadway.

"It was easy," her twin sister Bernice echoed. But their teeth chattered and their lips were blue with cold. They are big girls for their age. Each weighs 130 pounds. Their father and mother greased their children's heads at Yonkers and the two jumped into the cold Hudson at 10 a. m., yesterday, braved adverse currents gamely—had some liquid food when off 96th Street and after six hours and a half in the water reached the lower top of Manhattan without much ado.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS IS FACING CRISIS

GENEVA, Sept. 6.—Facing the most critical session since the league was formed, the league of nations assembly convened here today at 11 a. m.

On the other hand if the admission of Germany to full membership encounters unsurmountable obstacles and if Spain permanently withdraws because of a refusal to allot a permanent council seat to her, Europe may return to pre war rivalries.

Victim Believed To Have
Been Sitting On
Rails

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 6.—Lawrence W. Wilt, 35, of 1003 Leonard Ave., freight brakeman on the Pennsylvania Railroad, was instantly killed at South Charleston at 4:30 a. m. yesterday when struck by a northbound Pennsylvania passenger train.

The body was brought here by the Egan Co.

Local Pennsylvania Railroad officials were unable to give any details of the accident, as it happened on the Cincinnati division, but the version received here was that Wilt's train, which was south bound, had taken a siding at South Charleston to let the passenger train through. SENATE WILL MEET MONTH EARLY THIS FALL TO TRY JUDGE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—For the tenth time in the history of the United States, the Senate will try a federal official upon impeachment charges when it meets November 10 to consider the evidence against George W. English, federal judge of the eastern district of Illinois.

English was impeached last session by the House of Representatives upon recommendation of its judiciary committee which found the jurist guilty upon five counts. He was charged (1) with tyrannically and oppressively disbaring two attorneys, coercing a jury and threatening freedom of the press; (2) misdemeanor in office in handling bankruptcy cases; (3) extension of partiality and favoritism to a sole referee in bankruptcy; (4) corrupt and improper control of the deposit of bankruptcy and (5) that he has treated members of the bar coarsely, indecently, arbitrarily and tyrannically.

Preliminary details of the involved impeachment procedure were compiled with during the last session of the Senate and all preparations have been made to begin the actual trial when the Upper House reconvenes a month before the regular session in a special session called for that purpose.

The Senate will be turned into a court for the trial. Vice-President Charles G. Dawes will preside but the ninety-six members of the Senate by their votes will act as judges. The House of Representatives has appointed members to act as prosecutors of the impeachment charges and English will be represented by his own attorneys.

A notice already has been issued to English to appear on the opening day of the Senate ready for trial.

Only nine federal officials in history have been tried by the Senate, six of them judges. The only three convicted were judges: John Pickering, judge of the New Hampshire district court who in 1803 was held guilty of drunkenness and disregard of the statutes and dismissed from office; Robert W. Archbald, commerce court judge, who in 1912 was found guilty of corrupt collusion with coal mine owners and railroad officials and dismissed from office and West H. Humphreys, Tennessee district judge, who in 1862 was

The Workers

One day each year the Nation pauses in the strenuous rush of modern business affairs and stops to consider the debt that each one owes to the men who uphold the industries upon which the Nation's prosperity rests. It is the day when the capitalist is lost sight of, and the great army of workers, upon which capital depends, is in the foreground.

The United States is the greatest nation in the world today because employed in every line of labor there is a great multitude of intelligent, capable, upstanding workmen who have comfortable incomes and happy homes. They are in the truest sense the very backbone of the nation. Without them gold heaped mountains high would be as worthless as sand.

The business men of Xenia, appreciating profoundly the debt owed to the men who turn the wheels of industry in the city of Xenia and throughout the country, join in paying tribute to labor and acknowledge their debt to the men and women who devote their lives to carrying on the tremendous task of present day industry.

NUNLIKE DRESSES FOR ITALIAN WOMEN

By HEDDA HOYT

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Stylists are wondering whether the Italian women will accept the nunlike dresses which Premier Mussolini suggests in his newly-formed League of Nationalization of Women's Clothes. The League, which is headed by the Italian Queen, sponsors dresses which will protect Italian women from the "immodesty" of modern times.

The gowns accepted by the League cover the figure from neck to hem and they have sufficient width to conceal the outlines of the body. This movement for Italian-made clothes for Italian women has created quite a furor in the fashion centers of Paris, London and New York. The better class of Italian women have heretofore found French styles much to their liking and it is very doubtful whether they will accept a National uniformity of dress. Poorer may find the new mode economical and practical and may accept Mussolini's command.

Some of the French countries are already turning out French gowns of Italian inspiration to meet the situation in Italy. This may mean that before long we shall have Italian designs and colors in America. When Russian women gave up all thought of style after the Revolution we immediately turned to styles of pre-Revolution days in Russia. For instance, wide sleeves embroidered, tunics, high collars and smocks were examples of Russian influence.

It is very doubtful whether any country where the smart women are cosmopolitan will accept a National mode of dressing. We have recently witnessed the discarding of veils by Turkish women. Many of them now wear modern dress. Flappers of China are growing up with unbound feet and many of them wear bobbed hair and modern frocks. In many instances women are at their best when dressed in their native costumes but one must travel far these days to find a place where a modern trend in dressing is not found.

ARRESTS FOR BOOZE LAW VIOLATIONS IN OHIO ON INCREASE

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 4.—Arrests for liquor law violations increased more than twenty-five per cent in Ohio—birthplace of the Anti-Saloon League during the fiscal year ending September 1, B. F. McDonald, state prohibition commissioner announced today in his annual report. State dry agents arrested 5,356 alleged violators, an increase of 1,464 over the year ending September 1, 1925, McDonald reported.

More than 1,500 persons are in Ohio jails today for liquor law violations, he said. Of the more than 1,500 now serving terms, McDonald said, sixty-eight were women at Marysville reformatory for women, thirty-five at the penitentiary farm, London, O.; nineteen in Mansfield reformatory, thirty-six at the penitentiary and more than 1,400 scattered over the state in jails and workhouses for nonpayment of fines.

Convictions for the year totaled 2,638, an increase of 1,590 over last year. Fines assessed totaled $1,154,227, an increase of $469,772. The total amount collected under the Crabe act during the year which included some back fines was $1,338,246.

The state prohibition department cost the taxpayers $137,320 during the year.

McDonald said that the department was concentrating upon the liquor makers rather than the "half pint" violators. He said there have been few complaints against state officers making unwarranted raids following adoption of the new policy of getting definite evidence first.

Enforcement conditions throughout the state were generally improving the dry chief asserted. The prohibition commissioner reviewed conditions in Canton and paid high tribute to the late Don R. Mellett, who was slain during a crusade against vice and out-lawry.

"Progress is now being made in Canton," he said, "the same having been brought about by the supreme sacrifice of the editor of the Canton Daily News, Don R. Mellett."

"It is strange that the removal from office of the mayor and safety director of Canton two years ago was not sufficient to arouse the citizenship of that city to proper appreciation of the conditions there and that they should wait until loss of life occurred. "But as bad as it may be, I do not regard the Canton situation as bad or threatening as conditions that have been prevailing in Steubenville where a very large number of murders have been committed and I am informed that none of the murderers thus far have been convicted."

McDonald cited the movement to oust the mayor and police chief of Steubenville as an "encouragement."

Sunday afternoon and passed resolutions, urging the Rev. and Mrs. Brown's return to Xenia. Sentiment of the congregation, relative to the return of Dr. V. F. Brown, is voiced in a letter sent to Dr. Jesse R. Swank, for consideration.

The letter reads as follows: "Dr. Jesse R. Swank, "Care Monroe St. M. E. Church, Toledo, O. "Dear Dr. Swank: "Yesterday evening witnessed a very unusual meeting the official board of Trinity Church, this city. The occasion was the leaving of our pastor and friend, Dr. V. F. Brown. The meeting was called without his knowledge and its purpose was to secure his return to this charge. Fourteen members were present and four more sent favorable proxies. J. J. Stout was made chairman.

"The meeting was outstanding for its harmony, unity and determination in urging the return of Dr. Brown and most of all, for its flowing tributes of respect and love almost effusively bestowed and not unmixt with tears of sorrow at the possibility of his going away.

"Action was taken unanimously urging and requesting his return carrying the appointment of a committee consisting of Mrs. W. B. Chew, Mrs. J. A. Beatty and Mrs. Clara Reutinger, which should present the expressed desire of the official board together with a large petition, signed by the membership already at hand to the district superintendent, Jesse Swank for his consideration.

"H. C. Aultman was chosen as secretary and instructed to send telegrams to Bishop Henderson and Dr. Swank and to prepare letters to be presented to the Methodist Conference now meeting in Toledo.

"(Signed) H. C. AULTMAN, "Acting Secretary."

A TRUE STORY!

A XENIA Merchant Grouped Muslin of Different Price and Quality All on the Same Table and labelled it 12 1-2c Cents A Yard.

CUSTOMERS, Selecting Muslin at the Bargain Price, Ignored High Grade Muslin which Originally Sold at 35 cents A Yard and bought A Cheaper but Better Known Brand

WHY?

The women who surrounded this bargain counter bought the cheaper brand because of its well known label.

As against all other muslins they had learned to believe that the muslin which bore this label was the best.

They had learned the value of this label on a piece of muslin in the school of advertising.

In this school, with the daily newspaper as the teacher, live merchants are able to direct the trend of buying.

AMERICAN DOUGHBOY'S PAY

Much has been written and said about the pay of the American soldier. No one claims it is attractive or commensurate with what one may earn in industry. When compared with the pay soldiers in other countries receive, however, it is found that the American doughboy is the best paid fighting man in the world.

As low as the American soldier's pay is, it is eleven times as much as the Japanese soldier gets, and the pay envelope of one American soldier contains enough money to pay off forty one Italian or fifty-eight French soldiers for the same length of time. The yearly pay for an American soldier is $232; Great Britain, $240.98; Japan, $23; Italy, $6.20; and France, $4.38.

While the soldier belonging to Uncle Sam's army is the best paid, he is also the best fed fighting man in the world, according to a table just made public by the war department. According to the information given herein the average meal given the United States soldier would have to suffice for 1.4 British, 1.5 Japanese, 2.4 Italian, or 2.5 French fighters. That means he gets two and one-half times as much to eat as the French, nearly the two and one-half times as much as the Italian, one and one-half times as much as the British soldier.

JURIES NEGLECTING DUTY

There is an increasing frequency of jury verdicts—evidently of the compromise variety—to hold criminals guilty in degrees that are manifestly inconsistent with the evidence. This habit is to be charged to increasing sentimentality. It is becoming less and less unusual for those accused of offenses in higher degree—and who are evidently either guilty in that degree or innocent—to be found guilty of crime in lesser degree. Especially is this true in murder cases.

Such compromise verdicts are compromise of principle. Jurors who permit their sentiment or views relative to the severity and kind of punishment decreed by law to affect their verdict are false to their oaths. The penalty imposed is not their affair. They are not responsible for it. Nor have they any right to allow its consideration to enter into their verdict. The exercise of clemency is not in their Province. All that the jury can rightly consider is the evidence and the law of the case as instructed by the court. To allow other considerations to control their decision is to violate their solemn obligations to the court, to themselves and to society.

TRACKLESS LOCOMOTIVES

Interest in new inventions never ceases, and there seems to be no end of inventions. We have long been accustomed to the trolley cars running on the iron rails, but lately there has been a trackless trolley car—a car that retains the use of the central power station, with the current delivered through a trolley wire. It uses automobile wheels with pneumatic tires. This style of car has even become common in some localities. While it is not confined to the absolutely straight course followed by its predecessor, the street car, it must keep pretty close to it or it will get "off its trolley."

But now comes the astonishing information that a trackless locomotive has been invented which is propelled by its own gasoline plant, so that it can go where it pleases and wander from one side to the other side of the road as freely as desired. It has great speed, also, and this coupled with its weight gives it great momentum, which spells disaster to any other machine with which it might collide. We have become accustomed to the orthodox locomotive, and the location of most railroad crossings, so that we can avoid or ignore them as the disposition comes over us at the time, but if these new kind of locomotives are put to regular passenger service business, as some of its proponents inform us it will soon be, we shall never know when we are going to meet one coming around the corner, or bearing down upon us from a blind crossing.

Reckless motorists will probably hail this information with delight, for the present thrills of motoring are becoming passe for them. But the more timid ones will greet it with a sigh and wonder what is coming next to add to their driving woes.

By Jack O'Donnell

Ben Bernie, who gets a few pieces of eight each night for shaking a stick at his Rialto orchestra, has coined a new way to snap his fingers. It's just an upward twist of the wrist, indicating that the time has come to applaud. A man has a pretty solid foothold in life when he holds the applause of a blase Broadway audience between his thumb and fingers.

The big new Anchor liner Caledonia was being warped into her slip at 14th Street pier recently, when she fouled a bawler of one of the French Line ships, due to an unavoidable juxtaposition in which the ocean giants occasionally find themselves.

Captain David W. Bone, skipper of the Caledonia and veteran of the sea, received shortly after ward a rather curt note from the French Line, written in French. Captain Bone is not without a resourceful nature—the natural concomitant of a salty existence. He called one of his officers whom he knew to be a student of the Irish and Scottish tongues. The next day the French Line received a courteous answer to their note—neatly and meticulously written in Gaelic.

One thing about the coal shortage—it doesn't bother the wails who live in New York's garrets and sheds and never knew what it was to burn anything as luxurious as coal. These people know how to keep warm without settling for the "miners' differences." They adopt a much simpler more ancient course of procedure. They take an old baby carriage, and go to the nearest building under construction, fill the carriage with scrap lumber, and return to toast their toes at a neat little wood fire, in the stove. Even this is not as jolly as it sounds when the nearest new building happens to be 40 city blocks away, and the thermometer is around zero, and the baby carriage has one wheel gone.

NEW DISHES THIS WEEK

American Chop Suey: (Requested by "Mrs. A. V.") Make this when you have a good supply of rich brown gravy on hand. (The Chop Suey will be called for in Wednesday night's dinner menu, so make plenty of brown gravy with the leg of lamb for tomorrow night's dinner.) Fry one cup of sliced raw onions in three tablespoons of butter till a light brown, and then add one quart of brown gravy left over from a roast of lamb (or from roast beef, pork or chicken). Also add one cup of lamb left-overs (diced of beef, pork, or chicken) and when this boils, stir in one pint measure of the poorer parts of celery cut very fine (not the green, but the thin white ends of the stalks). Simmer till the celery is tender, then add one cup of crisp, diced uncooked celery (the better parts) and a can of the best grade of mushrooms. Cook ten minutes longer, but do not let boil. (It is best to cook it in the top of a double boiler.) Season to taste with salt and pepper. Serve in a border of boiled rice (which is a potato substitute, therefore no potatoes are needed in the dinner).

Vinegar Poached Eggs: The housewife who has once poached eggs in this way, will never poach them in any other. Fill a deep frying pan with boiling water; add one-half cup of vinegar. When it boils again, slip the eggs into it (from a saucer on which you have dropped them from the shell). Let poach as you ordinarily do. The only difference will be in the milky consistency of the egg white, the depth of the poached eggs, and the firmness of the egg which keeps the yolk from breaking in the water. Season to suit taste, and serve. Children do not notice the slight suggestion of vinegar about these eggs, and grown-ups find them more delicious for that flavor.

Baked Slice of Ham. Soak two pounds of ham (sliced one inch thick) in warm water for one hour, then drain, place it in a baking dish or casserole, sprinkle thickly with flour, season with a dash of salt and pepper, and cover with cold, sweet milk. Dot with bits of butter, using one-third cupful, and bake forty-five minutes in a hot oven (400 degrees Fahrenheit) or till the meat is tender. Serve hot, in the same dish.

INSTRUMENTS

I watched a worker in a yard the other day. He was using a sickle to trim the grass. When the job was finished, everything looked beautiful and the shrubbery got the wind and sunshine to better advantage.

This sickle could be used to cut down the reaching branches of lovely flowers and bushes that add to the landscape. But in the hands of one who loved beauty it was used only to beautify.

We are instruments in the hand of an unseen Teacher. How often we use the instruments at our command with blundering hand. And yet I am sure that that great Teacher understands our intentions, so that though we may be so deeply unworthy, whenever a good act or thought leaves this bodily machine that Teacher sees that it accomplishes its best good, as though it came from one far better and able.

The Theatre

With the opening of the musical comedy season the announcement comes from the Gus Sun Booking Exchange Co., Springfield, that shows this season will outdo anything in the way of miniature musical shows offered heretofore.

Producers of miniature musical shows are keen in realizing that it will take more than the ordinary show to get by this season, and, with that thought in mind, are surrounding themselves with a caliber of talent seldom seen in this popular class of entertainment. Principals who have commanded salaries ranging as high as $200 weekly will be seen in rosters of musical comedies playing the Gus Sun Circuit this season.

Homer Neer, general manager of the circuit, has worked out a plan which will insure the circuit a high standard of attractions throughout the entire season. By adding eleven-people shows to the circuit, a variety of musical shows, both in size and entertainment will be offered, establishing a new era

"Mitzi, I want you to listen to this," implores Dad. "Think of it, Kansas City is the second largest stock market in the world." Mitzi replies, that she thinks it's too lovely for words. Her reply, of course, being about her new negligee. "Anyway, Dad," says Mitzi, "we'll go out and I'll show you a thing or two."

"Don't you love it," urges Mitzi to Dad. Poor Dad he doesn't want to commit himself. Maybe she means the Bell Telephone Building they are passing, maybe she means the wicked looking blonde. She refers, of course, to the costume the lady is wearing. It's built on bolero lines. The collar is mannishly made.

"Look," stage whispers Mitzi nudging Dad somewhere in the ribs. "Look, a French felt hat and I have heard they are all the rage! Women have them in all colors, you know, but all the same style." Dad can't seem to work up quite the same enthusiasm but he doesn't wish to be poked so he notices as he is told to.

They had to go to a store to get something Mitzi had forgotten. There is a practical demonstration going on in the lingerie department to which Dad feels he is not invited. They are showing how the lace motifs are clapped around the knees garter fashion give the effect of decorated hose. When Mitzi takes Dad out to see signs — she shows 'em to him.

MEDICAL SPRINGS

Yellow Springs, the seat of Antioch College, takes its name from the medical springs found there. Formerly they were much visited and ample hotel accommodations were provided for invalids. Early in the century travellers often spoke of the place. The noted Duke of Saxe-Weimer, who was there in 1824, says in his travels "The spring originates in a limestone rock. The water has a little taste of iron and deposits a great quantity of Ochre, from which it takes its name. The spring is said to give 110 gallons of water per minute, which is received in a basin surrounded by cedar trees."

The yellow stream which comes from the basin runs a short distance over a bed of limestone and is afterwards precipitated into the valley.

"These limestone rocks form very singular figures on the edge of this valley; the detached pieces resemble the Devil's Wall of the Hartz."

MYSTERY TEAMS DOT PACIFIC COAST AS GRID SEASON NEARS

BERKELEY, Cal., Sept. 2.—While Stanford and the University of Southern California, because of their veteran machines, loom as the most formidable contenders for the coast conference grid title, a half dozen "mystery" teams from the Pacific Northwest present such a threat—that difficulty has been encountered in attempting to pick this year's winner with any degree of certainty.

For a number of years University of California walked away with first honors until it was finally taken for granted before opening of conference games, that the Bears would repeat. But with California's upset last year and signs of an even weaker team this coming season the other schools have thrown off their inferiority complex.

One of the most bitterly contested scrambles for the title in the history of coast conference play is considered certain.

Stanford and U. S. C., both strong last year are stronger this season. Excepting the sensational fullback Ernie Nevers, Coach "Pop" Warner at Stanford lost virtually no one by graduation. Warner is grooming "Hank" Millage to fill Nevers' shoes.

Last year's U. S. C. team of regulars is virtually intact again. Barring injuries it is certain to be a blacker threat than last year, and it was a dangerous team then.

Coach "Nibs" Price, successor to the late Andy Smith at university of California will endeavor to rebuild practically an entire team lost by graduation last June. California's outlook is not believed encouraging.

But the Northwest is teeming with "dark horses."

The Oregon Aggies, with Coach Paul Schissler, present a team of regulars who have battled together for three years. Among them is the sensational ground gainer, Schumacher.

With a new coach, Major Frank Milburn, a new spirit, and "Bill" Kelly, captain and quarterback, a whole team in himself, Montana University looks dangerous.

Coach John McEwan at Oregon University will have a stronger team than that which sprang a late-season surprise last year by holding the tramping Washington University champions to a 15-to-14 victory.

Washington rated this year as the best in the Northwest will probably have the best line in the conference. Coach Bagshaw's only "nightmare" is replacing Tesreau and Wilson in the backfield.

Last year Idaho built up a new team, The Vandals should be roaring at full blast this season.

Washington State's team will be light and inexperienced. To what extent this outfit will develop under the fighting spirit of Coach Hollingberry will be seen in its toughest game of the season, against U. S. C., early in October.

It appears to critics as if the Pacific Coast conference is in for one of the wildest title battles in years.

LISTENING TO VACATION TALES-MAKES WORKING DIFFICULT IN LATE SUMMER

Vacations have their advantages and their drawbacks.

The advantages are with those who are so situated they are able to enjoy possibly two weeks of leisure. The drawbacks are, in the opinion of the less fortunate ones, the ordeal of listening to other vacationists spin their yarns.

Listening to the returning vacationist telling about what he did, where he went, whom he met, how much he spent and how he liked it is one of the favorite indoor sports in every office and store these days.

Vacations, however, wouldn't be vacations unless there were, after the return, those happy hours when you can tell your friends and acquaintances about your trip, which was the best vacation under the best weather conditions at the best resort that ever happened.

Maybe the weather was worse than usual; maybe better; the hotel prices were higher; seldom lower; the crop of young heiresses and handsome millionaires was exceedingly good this year.

The vacationists are returning now, at least a majority of them. Every Monday morning finds a few more of them back in their offices, proudly exhibiting sun-burned shoulders and noses, stretching and yawning, and ready at any time to launch into a recital of their experiences.

Joe, the shipping clerk, sheik'd every girl that wandered within a mile of him. Genevieve, the demon typist had three or four young millionaires gasping for breath and fighting duels with each other on the beach at day break, and Mr. Jones, the boss, shot three birdies, had a hole in one, and landed the biggest fish ever taken out of the lake. Uhuh.

It's hard enough to do your work on a hot day in August, but when some bird is expounding the glories of salt water bathing or audibly basking in the memories of moonlight canoe rides at the next desk; just try and do it. If you have already had your vacation you are sorry it is over and if it is still to come, you simply can't wait for it. And you can't help but listen to him. It seems part of the etiquette of vacations that the returning traveler can tell you anything and you are bound to believe him. Particularly if he is the boss.

Nor does 5 o'clock bring relief. You are greeted at the door of your peaceful home by friend wife, who is overflowing with an account of the glorious motor camping trip the Smiths took.

But cheer up,—it can't last much longer. There will be a few more weeks of it, but after that it will be over until they start planning their next year's vacations, which will be about March 1.

RAIN INTERFERES WITH RESERVES AND MERCHANTS IN TIE

Rain smacked both ball teams for a row of Japanese aschans at the Washington St. yard Sunday afternoon when the Reserves and Merchants were collaborating on their third contest to decide the city title.

The elements opened up an angry protest while the score was tied at one and one, driving the athletes from the diamond after four and one-half innings of play. The advent of the rainfall spoiled what had started out to be an ambitious pitchers' duel and left the championship argument at just where it was a week ago—evenly divided.

The Reserves, sensing the possibility of a downpour, went out early after the contest, scoring their lone run in the initial stanza. H. Frank was safe on a fielders' choice and stole second. B. Frank fled out to Ward but Shuey came through with a single that plated H. Frank with the first run. Durnbaugh whiffed for the final out.

The Merchants made up for this discrepancy in the fourth when Ward deftly singled to right and did some handsome base running in order to tie the score. He stole second, took third on Kirksey's sacrifice fly to Valentine and scored on Anderson's infield out a moment later. This ended the protection as all enthusiasm was damped by a down pour.

Herman for the Reserves and Harris for the Merchants seemed to be breezing along ably when the rain started. Harris had permitted Ward to tie the score. He stole second, took third on Kirksey's sacrifice fly to Valentine and scored on Anderson's infield out a moment later. This ended the protection as all enthusiasm was damped by a down pour.

Mighty With the Lowly

Bill Regan, infielder purchased from the Columbus A. A. team, is one of the men who have put life in the Boston Red Sox, now showing some results of the efforts extended by Lee Fohl to rebuild the shattered club.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Predictions made by C. C. Pyle that professional tennis can be put over in this country are not as idle as the United States Lawn Tennis Association wishes to believe.

Because it never has been done before it does not follow that "open tennis" could not become as popular and as respected as "open golf."

Tex Rickard has been considering the possibilities of professional tennis for several years and when he had the plans drawn for his new garden he arranged lighting features with the game in mind.

"If I could get a couple of good players to turn professional I could put it over," Rickard said more than a year ago. "There might not be a lot of money in it at first but it looks like a game that could be sold to the public in time."

Pyle made a smart move when he succeeded in getting Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen to turn professional. When he announced that he was going to France with a contract for the French star, he was laughed at, but he came back with the contract.

When he announced that he had secured a number of other prominent players to join his troupe he was also given the merry ha, ha, but he may fool the officials again. It is highly improbable that Helen Wills, who forfeited her championship this year, ever will turn professional but there are a number of other high ranking American players who are considering offers.

The plea made by Mlle. Lenglen that she had worked long enough for tennis and that she was going to let tennis work for her in the future will find sympathy with several American players who have given plenty of their time to the development of the game at a personal sacrifice of time and money.

It is understood that Pyle has made an offer to William T. Tilden and it would not be a shock if he announced after the national championship tournament that he had decided to turn professional. He has had enough of glory out of the game and he is also in a position where tennis might be called upon to work for him.

It is hardly likely that Billy Johnston would give up his amateur standing and Vinnie Richards isn't a very good prospect for professional tennis.

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

ROSILYN RIDGEWAY learns on her wedding day from idle gossip that she has been married for her money. Before her enormous fortune was left her, she had been an over-worked little drudge in her father's inn. LANDIS RIDGEWAY, her husband, is a brilliant, fascinating man, who was forced into the marriage by his mother. Rosilyn, loving her husband, knows he is still in love with LYDIA HARBROOK, a beautiful, cold society girl who is wont on marrying STEVE VAN VORST, a wealthy old roue, although she is really fond of Ridgeway. RUPERT BRISCOE, a dissipated man of the world, has seen Rosilyn but once, and yet is deeply interested in her. Lydia Harbrook of this interest, and she and Briscoe concoct a plot whereby Rosilyn and Briscoe will see a great deal of each other, and Lydia will have a chance to exert her wiles upon Landis. The plan works, and Landis, finding himself often alone with Lydia falls under her spell once more.

Van Vorst, however, hungering for her love, decides to use MARIETTA FERNANDEZ, a dancer and sweetheart of Briscoe's in connection with a scheme. These two come to New York where Marietta begins to vamp Landis away from Lydia, leaving a clear field for the elderly schemer.

In the country at the Ridgeway place, Rosilyn, in a fever of jealousy and anxiety over the protracted disappearance of her husband seeks the solace of the countryside. After an exciting adventure she is rescued by Briscoe who tells a "fishy" story to account for his proximity to the scene. Soon after Landis effects a reconciliation with Rosilyn and becomes his old lovable self. The latter discovers damning evidence against Lydia and exerts her power to secure the upper hand—in the city meanwhile Marietta feels her power over Briscoe declining.

Torn by jealousy, Marietta surreptitiously sees Rosilyn and makes an ambiguous declaration of love.

Walking away the dancer stumbles into an underground passage where she finds Briscoe surrounded by incriminating evidence. The latter suspects treachery.

Her sweetheart persuades Marietta to leave the vicinity while he speeds back to Royal Cliff where a liquor revel is under way at the pool. Lydia leads the merry-makers.

Afterwards, Lydia contrives to get herself and Landis marooned on an island for the night.

CHAPTER 65 A Phone Call

"I am disgusted with Lydia Harbrook," said Mrs. Ridgeway, Senior to her daughter-in-law, after Lydia's all-night escapade with Landis on the island. "I am more disgusted than words can express. When she came back at eight o'clock this morning, I'd defended her from the house, had I been in your shoes!"

"They couldn't have helped it. The boat drifted off with the tide. Such things do happen."

"Lydia was at the bottom of all that!"

"Landis is fearfully upset and worried about it all," defended Rosilyn staunchly. "And of course it's on Miss Harbrook that the scandal really falls."

Mrs. Ridgeway Senior snorted. "Her shoulders are broad enough to bear it! Don't you worry!"

And she went on to tell her daughter-in-law how one of the maids had found a syringe in the visitor's room, and how she herself-suspicious — had searched there until she found a little packet containing a whitish powder.

The local drug-store proprietor had identified the stuff as cocaine! "I've often wondered," she continued, nodding sagely, "how Lydia managed to maintain such tremendously high spirits? And I've also puzzled over her sudden fits of depression and silence? This explains it!"

"Don't tell anyone," said Rosilyn quickly and generously. "She intends to give the habit up. I mean—that is—" and the girl broke off, vexed that she had inadvertently let slip the other's secret.

"So you knew about it? Then why on earth didn't you tell Landis?"

Rosilyn flushed vexedly. "It would be such a mean—advantage," Then, conscious of the oddity of this remark, since she was Landis' wife, she added, hurriedly, "I am sorry for Miss Harbrook."

"Spare your pity for a worthier object! She has small mercy on you, my child. Not that you need think there's anything between her and my son! He may have been indiscreet—and most men are wax in the hands of a pretty and designing mix, like Lydia—but he is honorable."

And the haughty dame stooped suddenly and kissed her young daughter-in-law with tears in her proud, dark eyes.

Rosilyn was touched. Thrilled, too, by the other's words.

But indeed she had been hurt by Landis' escapade. That the incident was on every idle, chattering tongue made it all the harder, for pride was wounded.

"Mr. Briscoe and he have gone to New York today. I'm sure it's because Landis wants to avoid Lydia," said the mother. "They're both returning tomorrow, and I think, they're hoping Lydia will be gone. I shall give her a broad hint."

"Most of the crowd are due to leave today," replied Rosilyn. "On the whole, last night's party was a huge success."

"Except for the cocktail raft," the other supplemented, with a little 'mouse' of distaste. "But we know who engineered that! Bo hemianism can be carried too far."

The young hostess went off to look up trains, and attend to her guests, and give the orders for the day.

Her thoughts dwelt on Landis. Rupert Briscoe had been vexed for her sake over the wagging tongues of gossip.

He had indicated, with virtuous and yet not overdone disapproval, that a check ought to be put on a husband's straying.

Under the influence of that sympathy, Rosilyn had confided in him the tale of the Spanish dancer's visit to Royal Cliff and the queer, distraught way in which the foreign girl had wandered off.

"She was so unhappy. I'm afraid she may do herself an injury. Her face haunts me. It was so beautiful, so tragic. I can still see her big, mournful eyes, with a whole world of sorrow behind them."

If she had seen Briscoe's face at that moment, subsequent events would not have happened.

But when her gaze did light on him at last, those handsome features of his were mask-like.

"I wouldn't worry," he spoke in staccato tones. "Landis can't help being attracted to these women—though a hint not to lead her on any further mightn't be amiss. As you say, Marietta Fernandez might do herself an injury, for these foreigners are all emotion, all impulse."

That had been all.

But Rosilyn was sore at heart. Most of the guests left after luncheon, and at half past six a 'long distance' telephone-call came from New York.

"I wanted Landis to return with me to Royal Cliff tonight," came the suave tones of Briscoe on the wire, addressed to Rosilyn, "but it seem he's keen on a theatrical party to be given in a flat in town. I think it's best to stick by him—so expect us back tomorrow, will you? And forgive my calling up, but I thought it might relieve your mind."

Relieve her mind? reflected Rosilyn, with bitterness of spirit. Her thoughts went, in direct sequence to the Spanish dancing girl. Was it at her flat that the party was to be given?

Unblemished SKIN

Gives You confidence

HOW conscious we are of our skin! Even one little pimple or blackhead will so embarrass us that we want to hide right away. And eczema, boils, blotches and rashes! Why, these awful things simply destroy all our ambition!

But what confidence we have in ourselves if our skin is clear and unblemished—free from any eruptions or breaking out! A clear skin is one of the greatest possessions in the world—and it is so easy to have it. All that is necessary is to keep our systems full of rich, red, pure blood. S. S. S. helps Nature build this blood. And the impurities that cause these so-called skin disorders are driven right out of the system.

If you want the kind of skin that captivates men and compels the admiration of other women, just remember that you can't have it if your blood is impoverished. But, just build red-blood-cells in your blood with S. S. S. and your dream of a soft, rosy, velvet skin, clear of blemishes, will be realized. Then notice the difference in the way you feel.

S. S. S. has proven for generations that it helps Nature build the rich, red blood that makes beautiful skin and healthy bodies. Let S. S. S. prove it for you.

Get S. S. S. from any drug store. And get the larger bottle. It's more economical.

UNCLAIMED HONORS

Vacation scatters people in all directions to camps, on auto trips, lake trips, and visits, and most of us are so engrossed in enjoying the precious, fleeting, leisure hours that even pursuing honors from the work-a-day time of year do not burden our minds.

So it is with some of the contestants in the County Library Essay contest, awards for which were given at the County Fair. Small sums of money, or ribbons, or perhaps both, still await Miss Jane Harner, Miss Ruth Hutchison, Miss Dorothy Norckauer, and Miss Ruth White.

The awards are ready in sealed envelopes for the claimants and may be had by calling at the home of Mrs. P. H. Flynn, 131 N. Detroit St., Xenia.

All who entered the contest have had the fun of expressing themselves about the value of a library and may have in addition the satisfaction of having contributed a worthy part to the success of the Greene County Fair.

tion of the pride of relatives and friends. One little girl tells us that her grandmother doubled for her the amount of her award and placed it in bank for her. So the trouble of sitting down to think about the meaning of an adequate library in a community has paid.

The Board of Governors of the Greene County Library have only one regret in regard to the essay contest. Some schools in the county did not take part in it and others in which essays were written failed to send the essays in to the judges or even to let the committee know that pupils had contributed essays. The contest was on this account necessarily incomplete.
